

Photos of Coleman Rim Hike
Fremont National Forest

July 31, 2011

The trail starts on an old jeep road running up the south side of Shepherd Camp Meadow.

In the upper meadow, the jeep road turns into a well-traveled cow trail.

Climbing toward the rim, one passes through thick, old growth fir and ponderosa.

Reaching the rim, there are sweeping views east of the Upper Chewaucan River Valley.

Hiking southeast along the rim, one encounters old, but stunted, mature trees.

There is no trail along the top of the rim, but it's easy to pick your way over the rocks.

Scenic spots for a rest and lunch are found at the rim's edge.

There are dramatic views heading back northwest along the rim.
